About the Program

Nuremberg and the Holocaust

This lecture series—part of an ongoing collaboration between the Robert H. Jackson Center and the Chautauqua Institution—will explore the Holocaust through the framework of the trials which brought the surviving perpetrators of war crimes and crimes against humanity to justice.

From the international expectations leading into the Nuremberg trials to the overwhelming documentation of the Holocaust and how this evidence was later used against the Nazis, the trials and its players will be examined by a scholar of the Chief U.S. Prosecutor, a bodyguard who was at Robert Jackson’s side for the duration of his time in Europe, a scientist with insights on the involvement of corporations that committed terrible acts (including the use of slave labor), and a distinguished member of the U.S. Department of Justice.

Finally, the legacy of the trials and the lessons learned from prosecuting those responsible for the Holocaust will be examined by a former Chief Prosecutor of an international tribunal, particularly in light of the impact Nuremberg has had on international criminal law today.

The Jackson Center advances the life, words, work and legacy of Robert H. Jackson through education and exhibitry. Through its comprehensive and ever-developing digital archive, it makes primary documents, film, audio, photographs and other resources on Jackson, the Supreme Court, Nuremberg, and the law available around the world.

Speakers

John Q. Barrett
Professor, St. John’s University; Elizabeth S. Lenna Fellow, Robert H. Jackson Center

“The Nazi Holocaust as Revealed at the Nuremberg Trials”

John Q. Barrett is Professor of Law at St. John's University in New York City, where he teaches constitutional law and legal history, and the Elizabeth S. Lenna Fellow and a Board member at the Robert H. Jackson Center in Jamestown, NY. Professor Barrett, a graduate of Georgetown University and Harvard Law School, is a teacher, writer, lecturer and public commentator. Barrett discovered, edited and introduced Justice Jackson's previously unknown memoir That Man: An Insider's Portrait of Franklin D. Roosevelt, which is about both FDR and Jackson himself. Professor Barrett regularly publishes “Jackson List” scholarly emails, which pertain to Justice Jackson, Nuremberg, the Supreme Court and related topics.

Father Moritz Fuchs
Jackson’s Bodyguard at Nuremberg

“Conversation with Father Fuchs... An Eyewitness Perspective”

Moritz Fuchs served in the U.S. Army in Germany during and after World War II. While there, he became Justice Jackson's bodyguard at Nuremberg and was with the Chief Prosecutor during Jackson's eighteen months of service at Nuremberg. Father Fuchs got to know Jackson on a one-on-one level during his time with the Justice. Shortly after an honorable discharge in 1947, Moritz Fuchs became a Catholic priest. Father Fuchs served in that capacity for over 30 years, eventually retiring from the priesthood in 2001. He now lives in Fulton, New York.

Eli Rosenbaum
Director, Human Rights Enforcement Strategy & Policy within the Human Rights and Special Prosecutions Section, Criminal Division, of the U.S. Department of Justice

“The Nazi Holocaust as Revealed at the Nuremberg Trials”

Mr. Rosenbaum has been director of the former Office of Special Investigations since 1995. He came to the department through the Honors Program after his graduation from Harvard Law School in 1980. He was a trial attorney with OSI from 1980 to 1984. He then left the department to work as a corporate litigator and later as general counsel for the World Jewish Congress. He returned in 1988 and was appointed as Principal Deputy Director. In May 2010, the Justice Department’s Criminal Division celebrated the creation of the Human Rights and Special Prosecutions Section, which merged the Office of Special Investigations and the Domestic Security Section into the new division headed by Rosenbaum.
